

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The convergence speed of a computer-implemented genetic optimization process is improved through the correction of child chromosomes containing undesirable gene combinations. Undesirable gene combinations may be identified 5 through application of heuristic techniques, statistical techniques, or a combination of the two.